This year we changed the judging process following feedback from previous entrants and the judges.

Any nominated business that met the criteria automatically entered the public vote. The public voting, which was open for a four-week period, accounted for 50 per cent of the overall score. The top four companies with the most public votes made it into the finalist stage.

All finalists were then asked to submit a video application and supporting evidence for the judges to assess and mark out of 50. The marks from the public vote and the judges were then totalled to reveal the winning business.

*Please note the judges were not informed of the results of the public votes until after they had marked the complete category to make sure the results did not influence their decision in any way. If a judge had a personal interest in any of the entrants, they were asked to sit out of that category. Details will be disclosed in the report.

In the event of a draw or if no application was submitted the company with the highest number of votes won. All the winners and scores were recorded on the judging day and the results have NOT been altered in any way since.

A report containing a breakdown of the results will be available following the awards.
